

WANTED

Alan Rudolph

The Challenge has welcomed a diverse list of winners over the years, but recently the DD2 Masters class has been dominated by defending champion Alan Rudolph. Series promoter Andy Seese-mann has established a $1350 bounty for any driver to beat Rudolph on-track in either of the two main events scheduled for the second stop of the Challenge (both drivers must cross the finish line). A large portion of that bounty is the entire weekend entry fee ($1050) to the PKRA rounds to be returned courtesy of the Challenge, with a set of practice tires ($300) thanks to the MAXSpeed Group. Rudolph currently has a six race streak, unbeaten in the last four rounds of the 2013 Challenge and the two contested thus far in 2014.

BOUNTY